Roadside Riches by Marion Lawrence

I searched the road for pennies;
But found none shining in the sand;

Then my eyes I lifted
and saw wealth on every hand.
There was gold of meadow lilies
Sapphire spikes—lobelia blue,
Running wild with lush red clover—
Heads of honey fresh with dew.
There were fragile threads of silver

Shining in the morning sun;
Mis-hung lacy octagons
By some busy spider spun.

There was all the wealth outstretching
That a Vermont summer brings
All along its roadsides—
Wealth of lovely growing things.
